Video courtesy: KHBS RICHMOND, KY (WTVQ) - This is the second time in a month that Richland County schools have gone to their teachers, asking them for a sacrifice. It's all about money and teaching kids. What's happening? Richland County Public Schools sent the following e-mail out to its teachers: "It is our expectation that you do your job and teach, even when the economic conditions are challenging. However, to continue to do so at a level that is commensurate with other area districts, we are forced to make some very difficult decisions. With the upcoming school year, we will be sending out a written communication concerning effective dates that will affect you. Please understand that this is not an employment related issue." It's a tough choice for school leaders. Richland County doesn't have enough money to pay teachers a standard salary. This isn't a money issue. "Teachers, if you have kids, you should be willing to be part of the sacrifice," said Lannon William, chairman of the Richland County Education Association. Students in Richland County Public Schools are the ones who are going to suffer. This is without a doubt the worst year in Richland County history, and it's not even under way. "We're going to have to rethink the roles that we have as professional educators. I'm going to have to reconsider how I do what I do. I don't know what I'm going to do," said Lannon William. "I have 10 years under my belt teaching, and I have so many other commitments and things to do. I just don't know if I can go on like this." It's a hard situation, especially in Richland County. The going is tough for people now, but teachers are expected to make sacrifices. Richland County President Lee Blackmon sent the following letter to teachers: "Now, more than ever, we need to be better stewards of taxpayer dollars."

A: I have a guess as to why you are getting the warning. From a brief search, it appears the list of formats being warned about are ones other than those you mentioned in your question. Your warning is caused by this line: `AndAlso UseBackup = True, vbMethod | vbMethodSet, "spanish-espanol-v1.5.bak"` I believe this is because the 'bak' suffix in the name gives the following compiler warning: `Specified EventSource object is not a valid SourceDataList` object. But the reason it is occurring is that you have a `ScriptBlock` property which is read/write, i.e. it can be used to pass command line arguments to your script: [Edit] The use of `[ScriptBlock]` is deprecated in PowerShell 4. As such, I recommend using the alternate syntax: `$a = [ScriptBlock]::Create('C:\Users\test\Desktop\export.ps1 -Path "C:\Users\test\Desktop\export.vbs" -Path "C:\Users\test\Desktop\export.csv" -ToFile "C:\Users\test\Desktop\export.csv" -Encoding UTF8')` [Edit] As @jones point out, it is worth pointing out that the ScriptBlock types are not meant to be used in this way, and so their behavior can be confusing if not used correctly. In your case, I would suggest getting rid of the [ScriptBlock] altogether, and using a plain old string instead:

... -ToFile "C:\Users\test\Desktop\nexport.csv" -Encoding UTF8...

Q: Python/django model query that checks if a related model has a boolean field set to true I have the following django model:

class Attachment(models.Model):
    user =
```

---

models.ForeignKey('auth.User', on_delete=models.CASCADE) approved = models.BooleanField() In the admin, I can see a list of all of the user_id's that have approved set to true for the list of Attachments that the user has access to. I am looking to give a conditional style form field based on the existence of a user and the approval value of their related attachment.
